MANY OBSTACLES TO OBSTRUCT WORK IN RAISING WARSHIP

Work in Havana Harbor in Raising the Maine Has Not Yet Gone Beyond the Experimental Stage.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Havana, Sept. 4.—The work on the wreck of the Maine has not yet gone beyond the experimental stage, if one studies closely the different tasks being taken to carry out the plan of the cofferdam and to raise the wreck or that part of it which was not damaged by the explosion. While the general plan of building a cofferdam around the wreck and pumping out the water and mud has been generally followed, the minor details, such as making the cofferdam tight and strong, and able to withstand the outside pressure of the water have proven greater than the average person will imagine.

In the first place, many of the circular caissons forming the cofferdams were very badly driven. One gave way entirely before pumping was started. These steel slabs of pillars are 25 feet long. The water about the wreck is about 35 feet deep. The soft silt and mud is 10 or 15 feet of the pile in firm clay and hardpan at the bottom of the harbor. As the water is pumped lower in the cofferdam the pressure from the outside increased, and as the pressure on the caissons increased the circular affairs gave in, taking an oval form to a slight extent, not noticeable to the eye, but clearly shown by the test lines set. This trouble the engineers tried to obviate by dumping rock on the top of the caissons and against the inside walls of the cofferdam. The water pumped down to the 18-foot level, showed the weakness of the cofferdam, and with the rock dumped inside made the work of pumping out more dangerous.

The engineers may be able to take out a few feet more, but they will hardly attempt to clear the basin of mud and water as the plan was originally announced. The air part of the wreck which suffered little from the explosion—the set more, and this will have to be floated, and to do this all the bulkheads must be made absolutely secure.

That portion of the wreck can be towed to an American port and the people who will spend close to a million dollars in raising it, may be given an opportunity to viewing what remains of the ill-fated vessel. The forward part of the ship is nothing but junk, even to the bottom plates, not even a small connection holding the bow to the after part. The destruction was so complete that it is difficult to identify many of the pieces, even though the naval constructor here has a model of the original ship with which to compare the pieces. There is no chance to find any of the remains of those who were in this part of the ship, as they have undoubtedly been swept away with the tide and storms of years.

Much mud and wreckage remains in the hold of the after part of the ship, and this is being removed, the water tight compartments enabling the workmen to go below the present water surface. Many of those engaged on the work think the wreck will be towed to some American port, even to the Canal Exposition at San Francisco. The raising of the Maine, at least the expensive manner in which the work is being done is the result of the sentiments of American people and it is not thought that the people will permit the wreck being taken out to deep water and sunk before they have had a chance to see it.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Chesapeake Courthouse, Sept. 4.—Nearly attired and anxious to tell his part of the case, Henry Clay Beattie, alleged wife slayer, appeared in court today ready to take the stand in his own fight to escape the electric chair.

"Thank God, I am at last to make my own fight," he said with a great deal of agitation.

The aged father of the prisoner and other witnesses were first called to the stand today to refute certain testimony.

The prisoner then took the chair. He appeared calm and indifferent to the buzz of expectancy that filled the court room.

Testimony Given.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Beattie gave his age as 26 and said he was a buyer for his father's mercantile business. Led by counsel, the accused testified that he never had confidential relations with his cousin, Paul.

Testifying as to his relations with Leah Bluff, Beattie told how he became acquainted with her subsequent to the birth of her child.

"Did they think you were responsible?"

"I suppose so, as they thought I had more money than anyone else. Next thing I knew I was called to her lawyer's office and as a consequence there was nothing to do but fork up the money and I was the laughingstock of the town. I never for a minute thought I was the father of her child and Leah swore at the coroner's inquest who was not its mother."

BIG DEMONSTRATION FOR COMPLETION OF NEW FERNBANK DAM

Festival in Honor of Completion of Dam Across the Ohio River was Inaugurated Today.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 4.—The city is gaily decorated and the big crowds in the downtown streets lend a festive air to the opening today of the great celebration in honor of the completion of the Fernbank dam across the Ohio river. The festivities will continue through the week and the program comprises the official dedication of the dam, upon which occasion six bottles containing water from the Great Lakes, the Mississippi river, the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, the Panama Canal and the Gulf of Mexico will be thrown over the new dam, so as to mingle their waters with the water of the Ohio river; river and street parades, rowing regattas, motor boat races, band contests and many other features of entertainment.

Through the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce, the committee of citizens in charge of the celebration and other civic bodies the week has been made a homecoming week for a large number of former Cincinnatians and the meeting of the Ohio Valley Improvement Association, the reunion of Alumni of the University of Cincinnati and other gatherings of a similar nature will contribute to swell the crowds of visitors and add to the festive character of the occasion.

The Fernbank dam, the completion of which, on July 22 last, is the occasion of this week's celebration, is one of the important links in the chain of Ohio river improvements undertaken by the United States government facilitating navigation upon the Ohio river, which forms an important waterway, giving an outlet for the commerce of a large area of the middle West to the Mississippi river and the latter to the sea. In accordance with the general plan for the improvement of the Ohio river, as sanctioned by the United States government, a chain of fifty-four dams will be constructed across the river between Pittsburgh and Cairo, each provided with locks for passing river craft around the dams. The entire improvement is expected to involve a total cost of about sixty million dollars and, when completed will insure nine feet of water in every part of the river, from Pittsburgh to Cairo, all the year round. In view of the fact that heretofore navigation in the upper and middle course of the Ohio frequently had to be suspended for several weeks and even months at a time owing to the low stage of water, the importance of this improvement can scarcely be overestimated.

The general project of the Fernbank dam was adopted by Congress on June 2, 1895 when an appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars was made for the preliminary work of surveying and planning the dam. The actual work on the dam was begun in May, 1905 and the work was practically completed in January of the present year. Additional work on the river banks near the dam was necessary, however, and the sand accumulated in the recesses of the lock-gates had to be removed and not until July 22, last, was the American flag hoisted from the big flag-staff at the dam by Major Jervey, in charge of the work, and the dam and lock placed in commission. The first craft which passed through the lock on the morning of that day was a gasoline launch, named "Ramona," owned by the Ramona club. Capt. Albert Bottinger, who had worked indefatigably for the improvement, and a number of prominent Cincinnati citizens were on the boat when it passed through the lock.

The Fernbank dam, the construction of which cost $1,200,000, has a width of 185 feet, with a lock 300 feet long and 110 feet wide. The lock is on the Ohio side of the river, while the so-called "four-traps" which can be operated by compressed air so as to regulate the flow of water through the dam, are located close to the Kentucky shore. The four traps have a total width of 240 feet and between them and the lock is the dam proper, formed of 225 wickets, of a total width of 900 feet. It is expected that the total improvement work in the Ohio river will be completed in about ten or twelve years.

ALASKAN SITUATION IS VERY DIFFICULT PROBLEM TO SOLVE

Complicated State of Affairs Prevails in Territory and Issue Will Probably Be Presented at Next Session of Congress.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, Sept. 4.—Threatened by the loss of priceless mineral resources, deprived of the benefit of its rich coal fields, denied an efficient form of government, and its valuable fishing industry in the hands of a grasping monopoly, Alaska has presented one of the hardest problems which Congress has faced during the past session. Already plans have been formed which will make this session this situation has resulted: problem one of the leading ones of the next session.

During the session that has been carried on furiously for several weeks the Cunningham coal claims have been canceled by Secretary Fisher, of the Interior Department. His action saved to the people from the attempted grab of the Morgan-Cunningham syndicate, thousands of acres of high quality coal worth uncounted millions of dollars.

No adequate law for the development of the coal fields appears in the statute books, and with vast supplies at hand, Alaska must get her coal from distant points—even Australia. Secretary Fisher will recommend a practicable law to Congress.

Richard R. Ryan's attempt to acquire from the government valuable terminal privileges for a railroad at Controller bay has not been consummated but the prospects seem to favor the enterprise. Congress passed a law giving Ryan permission to build a wharf over shallow water to a deep, narrow channel in Controller bay. The grant was subject to approval by Secretary of War Silliman however, and the matter is pending in the War Department.

Ryan has not received title from the government for locations under soldiers' scrip of land on the shores of the bay made in the interest of Ryan but it is not these lands can not be denied him and that the delay has been merely a matter of official routine. Each of these locations extends for 160 rods along the bay but are not contiguous. The law provides that every alternate claim, 80 rods on the bay shall be retained by the government.

Ryan had the presumption to file a terminal claim of 40 acres, covering an entire frontage of one of the government's 80 rod reservations. President Taft, however, has said that that claim is clearly against the law.

With characteristic foresight Ryan has surveyed a railroad right of way, about 2 miles long, from Controller bay to the coal fields in which the priceless deposits sought by the Cunningham claims are located.

There is a general impression that if Ryan and his backers build the railroad it will eventually pass to the Morgan-Cunningham syndicate. The syndicate owns the only railroad in Alaska, with a length of about 10 miles, and when the Cunningham claims seemed to be within reach, had planned to build a short branch to the coal fields. The shore terminus is at Cordova, not a great distance from Cordova bay.

Senator Polakoff (Rpn. Wash.) who is an authority on Alaska said today that the parties seeking to grip the wealth in a monopoly are J. P. Morgan, the Guggenheims and a London firm, Close Bros.

"Should the government give them a transportation monopoly in Alaska," declared the Senator, "it would be one of the most stupendously rich money making propositions in the world. Even an increase over reasonable rates of 10 to 15 cents a ton would mean millions increase above ordinary profits. The Interstate Commerce Commission has no control over railroads in Alaska."

"A monopoly is not only charged but is admitted by these men as the object they have in view. They seek to control not only land transportation but the ocean shipping and are now credited with being masters of the great fisheries and large mercantile enterprises. It is a private monopoly and they are seeking to extend it over vast mineral interests in Alaska."

"As a remedy I believe that the government should develop a large coal deposit for its own use and for public distribution. It should construct a railroad from the mine to the coast and operate a fleet of steamers to convey coal to our naval stations throughout the Pacific and to consumers in the cities in the Pacific coast states. In that way an effective such as would be based upon corporations also engaged in coal production and disposed to extort exorbitant prices from the consumers."

Present laws applying to Alaska make the development of coal deposits there impossible. An individual is permitted to hold only 160 acres of coal land and it seems obvious that an attempt to work on such a small basis could result only in loss.

Bills introduced in the Senate by Polakoff, Works (Rpn. Cal.) and Jones (Rpn. Wash.), present solutions of the problems. They are similar in respect to providing for strict government control of railroad rates and the price to be charged consumers, air remuneration to those engaged in the industry but no monopolistic extortion, are the points held in view by the Senators.

Senator Works' bill was written by Clifford Finch. Some of its points are that the Secretary of the Interior may lease to a person not to exceed 5,120 acres of coal land for a term of not over 30 years. A small royalty on the production is made payable to the government. Leases are not to be granted under the condition that the lessee "will not monopolize or unduly restrain the trade in coal and that the lessee will proceed to develop the coal diligently."

Full power is given the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix the price at which the lease may sell coal.

HALL & HUEBEL

COMMON SENSE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.

Rheumatism has for ages been a puzzle to the doctors. Some claim it to be an infection, a germ disease. Others claim that the cause is uric acid; a kidney disease. It is said that uric acid is carried by the blood into the small arteries of the joints and skin where it crystallizes and it is the small, sharp crystals that cause intense pain with every motion of the body by cutting into the flesh and nerves. Whatever the cause, the best relief known is an Alkaline Effleur of the Salicylates. The chemical nature of the Salicylates is to form soluble compounds with the urates. In this way these crystals are dissolved, taken up by the blood and taken out of the body by the kidneys.

This rheumatic effleur is taken in teaspoonful doses in hot water before meals. The cure is often in a day or two, yet the remedy should be taken for some time to thoroughly neutralize the blood and prevent a recurrence of the trouble. The effleurations, as the doctors would say, that is the kidneys and the bowels, should be kept active. Rheumatic Effleur is compounded by Mr. Pfeiffer, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist, who would be pleased to give you any other information you wish. Sold at 50c. OBITUARY.

Isabelle Kerr.

Isabelle Kerr, Sept. 4.—Isabelle Kerr, aged eighty-eight years and for the past fifty years a resident of Rock county, died this morning at the home of her niece, Mrs. William Honeysell in this village. Miss Kerr was born in the north of Ireland on September 11th, 1822, and came to this country with her parents when but six months old. She remained in New York state until some fifty odd years ago when she came West to Janesville, living for several years in the families of the Lappin and the Jackson households. Since leaving Janesville she has made her home in and about Footville, living with relatives. She was the oldest of eight children, all of whom have preceded her to the world beyond. The funeral will be held on Tuesday from her niece's home, Rev. F. Ambrose officiating. The Interment will be at the Center cemetery.

Fifty Hurt in Train's Crash.

New York, Sept. 4.—Running wild, a nine-car steam train of the Long Island railroad crashed into a ten-car electric train at Holland station, Rockaway Beach, injuring 50 of the passengers and hurrying the lives of a thousand others. No one was killed.

Sanity and Feet.

Two Persian scientists have advanced the idea that the sanest type of men have large feet, while the sanest types of women have small ones.

W. Man as an Originator.

There are few disputes in life that do not originate with a woman.—J. Venial.

HIS OWN MAN.

Every boy looks forward, with special delight, to the time when he will be his own man, as he likes to phrase it, at least, as we boys used to express it. By that, he means the time when he can do as he wishes, as the grown folks do, and not be responsible to anyone but himself; when he can quit going to school and running on errands, if he wishes.

If he does not know it at first, he has to learn that he does not become his own man by simply passing out from under the control of his parents, but by coming under the control of his own higher nature—his judgment and will and conscience. When he reaches the age for taking himself out of the hands of his parents, just as they once reached a similar age, he must have been so trained in the mastery of himself that he is ready for the new responsibility. And, unless he has been given little tasks in self direction all along, and more and more, as he got used to it, he will have too big a job on his hands all at once. The best thing his father and mother ever do for him is to teach him to take things without them, while they take their place beside him as companions and friends.

Many a boy is, in fact, wiser than his parents and is so recognized before he is old enough to be free from the law of obedience, but it is not a good thing to let him know that they think him wiser. Before he is really his own man two things are necessary. He must reject any other master and must secure positive and personal control over every power of his body and mind. These things will discipline him.

One rival is some strong personality in the form of a boy who appeals to his weakness or even his good traits. If that boy controls him, he is not his own man. Another rival is public sentiment, in the form of the bunch or gang with which he goes. A boy will help make laws for the crowd without feeling the need for any discipline for himself, and yet he is not his own man as long as he allows them to dominate his private life.

His other rival is found on the inside, among the passions and impulses and fancies which are likely to take the reins of government in hand any minute. A hot temper is one of these rivals. When he is controlled by temper or jealousy or envy, when he lets any vulgar passion run away with him, that becomes his master. The effect of this is to weaken him, to confuse his judgment and dull his conscience.

When a boy becomes his own man he has to take in hand a great many different things that belong to him and insist on being with him all the time. He has to take charge of his imagination, and that is no easy task. He must know when to turn it loose, which way to send it and when to harness it up to some heavy walking and pulling.

Now a boy naturally prefers to control others rather than himself. Thinking he is right, he is not apt to single himself out for special disciplinary treatment, and he usually regards enforced obedience to those who insist on being over him as all the discipline he needs, which means that the task of acquiring self control must be set by laws. Boys will form laws and by-laws for their clubs, but they do not aim at discipline in the interest of self control.

And he has another drawback. He is in a state of unstable equilibrium and he must learn himself, as new traps come out. Then he acquires to do everything else to get acquainted with the latest come among his attributes; while he is doing that, something unexpected is likely to take place. The result is turmoil and swarming defeat. But he learns again and is in the saddle. Thus he learns.

A good test of self control is ability to fix and hold one's attention to a given matter as long as he wishes. The old story is in point, on the reverse side, about the man who grew rich by telling how to turn eggs into gold. His formula was simple. The money was collected in advance and would be refunded if the formula was faithfully tried without the promised results. Take the folks of a dozen eggs, hold them over the fire a dozen minutes without once thinking of the word hippopotamus.

If a boy cannot be his own man without having control of himself then he must be master of his body. That means to conserve his strength and prevent all expenditure of it. He must be able to handle that body as the driver his horse. It means that he keeps his powers at the highest degree of efficiency. He is not his own master if he does not keep a clean body. He must know how to relax and rest. He must know himself and be on the alert when those curious and rapid chemical changes take place in the body and require instant readjustment. He must control his muscles. He must keep his imagination clean. He must fix his eyes on the true goal.

He must acquire this through imitation of an attractive example and we all know where he ought to find that example. Others must have thought it out for him and led him into his kingdom over himself.

Their Friend

She was always sitting there when Sereno went by, leaning back in the wicker hourglass chair. Sometimes a book or magazine lay open in her lap, but more often it had slipped unobserved to the floor. Sereno's first impression of her was that she was the loveliest woman she had ever seen; her next that she was the weariest looking.

Sereno was very young. It was not in the central telephone office where she worked and the hours were long and the pay meager. Sereno had worked there since she left school. She lived with old aunt who did dress-making and had always acted the part of a mother to her.

One Sunday afternoon when Sereno went by she had Dave with her. Dave had been devoted to Sereno all through her school days and since. He was a big, gentle fellow, all ambition and vim and sound physique, who meant to make a little home for Sereno. He had not mentioned it to her yet. Before another Sunday arrived a new girl came into the office. She was a showy, handsome girl, who always had an answer or a part little laugh ready.

Sereno shrank from association with her and the girl perceived it. Consequently when Dave came that Saturday afternoon to wait for Sereno and to accompany her home the new girl tried to discomfit Sereno by flirting with him. She asked him to read the numbers while she "plugged" at her switchboard, and Dave, unconscious of any wrongdoing, complied. Sereno was angry and went home alone as fast as her feet would carry her, a very much disturbed little girl. Next day when Dave called her up she gave him over the "phone" a spirited reply and hung up the receiver. When he came to call she would not see him.

She was so miserable that on a certain afternoon when rain menaced she walked to work without her umbrella. There was none at the office so she had to borrow, so she had to walk back through the drizzle, which suddenly became a downpour. Just as she reached the veranda lady's house, she had started to run in dismay at getting drenched, when a voice called coolly, commandingly: "Come here, I want to see you."

The veranda lady had come to life and had spoken. Sereno came with all her might to the proffered shelter and sank into a chair.

"They sat a moment watching the rain. 'I have seen you go by every day since I have been here,' said the veranda lady in her slow, sweet, tired way. 'I'm glad this rain came as that we could get acquainted. You work, don't you?'"

Sereno told her how and where she worked. And she told a great deal more than her words conveyed. For the lady was reading the meaning of her own little face and miserable eyes.

"I'm not happy," blurted out Sereno. "I'm—" And then she told the veranda lady the whole story.

"Oh, my dear!" said the older woman. And she put up her white hand and brushed back her hair. There was gray in her hair, Sereno saw. And on her finger was a great red stone like a bit of fire. An engagement ring. "Oh, my dear! You were jealous—jealous! Of that dear boy? You see, I can tell he is a dear boy. And you are a dear little girl. But you will wreck your life if you aren't careful. It's very lucky for you that you can still make up. And when you have made up stay so."

Splashing through the rain, laden with raincoat and umbrella, came a tall young figure. It was Dave and he was coming straight for her house. Sereno knew, looking for her. She caught her breath.

"Why, there he is now!" coming to bring you an umbrella. The dear boy! Call to him—Call to him, quick!" Sereno called. And Dave heard. His face was very bright as he came to the veranda, and though the lady in the hourglass chair was wonderful to see, he had eyes only for Sereno, whom he helped very promptly into the raincoat. A very contrite, humble little Sereno she was, too.

"You must come and see me together some evening," said the veranda lady, as they were going away. "I want to know you both better. I'll make you something nice in the evening dish and ring for you some songs I know you'll like."

"Oh, well, come," cried Sereno. "And thank you a million times!"

Next day as Sereno was passing she ran up to the veranda railing to speak to her new friend.

"We've made up," she said, radiant. "I'm no longer going to be a bit jealous of him again as long as I live. He didn't care for that Ethel Slater. I should have known. It was horrid of me not to trust him. And you did it all, you dear, sweet, beautiful thing, you!"

"She picked up the lady's hand and kissed it.

"I'm so glad you made up," she said. "We didn't, you see—he and I. I was jealous, too. And when I came to my senses it was too late!" She looked away.

"He had got over caring?" breathed Sereno, tragically.

"Oh, no!" The veranda lady caught her breath. "He just died," she whispered, miserably.

NERVOUS DEBILITY MODERN AILMENT

Has Swept Country Like Wildfire—People Are in Run-down Condition.

The haste and worry and strain of modern life has produced a modern ailment. This modern ailment is nervous debility and during the past ten years it has swept over the country like wildfire.

Today a large percentage of the population, particularly city dwellers, are afflicted with nervous debility or a "run-down" condition as it is called. The chief symptoms of this modern complaint are lack of vitality and energy, nervousness and stomach trouble, weak back, poor circulation, constipation and insomnia.

Old-fashioned remedies failing, a modern tonic was introduced in Europe to overcome this trouble. The medicine was an instantaneous success and a similar tonic is now meeting with tremendous success in this country. The tonic is called Tona Vita and it builds up run-down people in a few weeks time.

Are you a victim of this miserable, run-down, half-sick, first-class condition? Are you nervous and depressed? Do you lack energy and ambition? If so, you have nervous debility and the wisest possible thing you can do is to let Tona Vita build you up and bring back your health and strength as it has done for thousands of others. You will be astonished how quickly this great modern tonic will make you feel as though made over.

Lee's Rhubarb Laxative, the most potent remedy, is used in cases of chronic constipation. Rhubarb is the finest of all natural laxatives. Other drugs strain and weaken the intestines, rhubarb strengthens them. Lee's Rhubarb Laxative is an ideal family medicine and should be given to children in preference to all others. The taste is pleasant.

Smith's Pharmacy has the agency for these two great medicines in Janesville and will refund your money if you are not completely satisfied with them.

Losses Caused by War.

Norman Angell calculated the Franco-Prussian war has cost Germany $400,000,000 more than she got in indemnities from conquered France. For instance, he says $150,000,000 was spent by Germany in increasing its peace army to 520,000 men; $400,000,000 in wages was lost by the Germans killed and wounded. The permanent German war force was enlarged by 100,000 men, and that has been maintained for 40 years, at a total cost of $1,000,000,000. Then there was the loss of German trade and German foreign markets.

Puts Blame on Elders.

Dr. C. Stanley Hall has collected facts regarding the fears of children. These fears are generally created by servants. He found that 1,701 children had 6,456 fears, the leading ones being the fear of lightning and thunder, reptiles, strangers, dark, death, domestic animals, disease, wild and male, mice, rats, robbers, high wind, etc. A few of these fears are rational. In one place children were found who dreaded the end of the world—a fear created by adult teaching.

The Turkish Bath Will Break Up A Bad Cold

Many people look at a cold as a very common occurrence, and think it must take its course.

This is a great mistake. Most of the cases of consumption start from a severe cold. A cold is like a fire—the sooner it is checked the easier it is to control it. When you feel a cold coming on, do not wait, go to the Turkish Bath Parlors at once and rid yourself of it. Ladies' hours daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. and all day Tuesday. Men from 1 P. M. to 11 P. Money and Its Drawbacks.

Some people are left money just in the nick of time, and make good use of it; it is cautious to others to receive money that they have never earned. A good many people would never do any work at all if it wasn't for the fact that they had to, and so a wise Providence decrees that money shall not come their way except by the sweat of their brow.—The Captain.

Thumb as a Sign of Capacity.

Lady Ritchie, daughter of Thackeray, has many interesting stories to tell in her book of reminiscences about the great man who came to her father's house. Turgeneff once said to her: "Look at my thumb, and see how small they are. How could a man with such small thumbs be capable of anything? People with little thumbs never do what they intend to do; they always let themselves be prevented."

Post-Prandial Indulgence.

The man who regularly drinks coffee, port or liquor after dinner is physiologically worse off than the man who does not.—The Lancet.

ASKS TEN THOUSAND OF THE INTERURBAN

ADMINISTRATOR OF THE ESTATE OF HARRY THURWACHTER, ALLEGES HIS DEATH DUE TO INJURIES.

PAPERS FILED IN CASE

Claim Made Deceased Was Injured While Passenger on Interurban Car and Died as Result of Accident.

Papers in a suit for ten thousand dollars brought by Fred L. Clements, administrator of the estate of the late Harry Thurwachter, who died on March 21st, last, at Mercy Hospital, naming the Rockford and Interurban company as defendant, have been filed, in which it is alleged that the deceased died as a result of injuries sustained while a passenger on the defendant company's car January 15th, last.

It will be remembered that Mr. Thurwachter, who was employed by the Hotel Myers, died after several weeks' illness at Mercy Hospital on March 21st, last. It was known he was married, but separated from his wife and it was not until after his death that she was found and notified of his illness. He was buried in Fond du Lac, his old home.

According to the complaint it is alleged that Harry Thurwachter was a passenger on the Interurban car from Beloit on the evening of January 15. That the rear wheels of the car ran into the switch of the defendant company at their freight house on Franklin street, throwing Mr. Thurwachter against a seat with such force that his collar bone was broken and his skull fractured, aside from other injuries. It also alleges he suffered from these injuries which ultimately caused his death, for some months.

The wife, Ophelia Thurwachter, is named as his only heir and the suit is brought by F. L. Clements as administrator of the estate. It will probably come up in the fall term of court. Jeffries, Monat, Oestreicher and Avery represent the administrator and Thos. S. Nolan, the Interurban company.

SCOUTS ACTIVE AT FAIR GROUNDS TODAY

Doing Police Duty and Otherwise Very Helpful—Membership Increasing Rapidly—Planning Entertainment.

That the Boy Scout movement is winning many supporters solely upon the merits is shown by the rapid increase in the number of boys enrolled. There are at present over one hundred boys in this city actively engaged in the duties imposed upon the scouts and the interest manifested by them is winning the confidence of others who have hitherto been reluctant for one reason or another to enlist.

The scouts were on duty at the fair grounds today to perform duties similar to those assigned them at the time of the motorcycle races on August 26, when they rendered services very helpful to the management and to the police. They were placed on guard around the track and in case of accident or any contingency requiring action by the persons in charge were prepared to communicate with the officer at the grandstand by means of the signal flags in the use of which they have been carefully instructed.

A large number of the boys reported for duty and were taken to the grounds under the direction of Captain Jackle. In addition to the police duty to which they were assigned they sold programs, acted as ushers at the grandstand and gave an exhibition drill as shown on the regular program for the day.

Several of the scouts took part in the bicycle race for scouts only and in all of the events in which they took part they showed an interest and energy that speaks well for the zeal of those directing the movement and keeping alive the enthusiasm of the boys.

At present there are over a dozen boys qualified for second class scouts and all are working hard to win additional honors and higher rank. The committee in charge has decided that at least three months' credit in school will be required as one of the qualifications for first class scouts.

At present the officers are considering giving an entertainment some time in the near future for the benefit of the scouts here. If present plans will be successful an entertainment of high order will be given during the early part of next month. Arrangements are being made with the Rooney Boys, a company of entertainers well known throughout this part of the country, for the high class entertainment furnished by them. Nothing definite has as yet been done but it is believed that if arrangements cannot be made with this company another will be secured which will be equally as good.

Acres and Bible Letters.

It has sometimes been stated that there are more acres in Yorkshire than there are letters in the Bible. A person hearing the statement for the first time is inclined to doubt it, but it is true, all the same. Authorities differ as to the exact acreage of the county, one giving it as 3,882,848 and another as 3,771,843. But the number of letters in the Bible is said to be 2,560,480, so the acres beat the letters with something to spare.—Notes and Queries.

A Dangerous Wound.

Senator Robert L. ("Fiddling Bob") Taylor tells about a man in the backwoods of Tennessee who applied for a pension for a gunshot wound. An examining surgeon of the medical board striped and examined him, ejaculating finally, "Old man, we cannot find a single bullet in your hide. Where were you shot during the war?" The old man said, "Well, gentlemen, I was shot in the substitute."—Leslie's Weekly.

GOLF LINKS ATTRACT LARGE CROWDS THAT ENJOY THE CIRCUS

Doings by Society Result in Wry of Entertainment Shows Which Went Can Be Accomplished in Way of Fun.

Out at the Shinnap Golf links this afternoon and evening there is something doing every minute. What with the Thuring Slayers circus, the side show, the peanut vendors and the general sight of fun it is a carnival of birth. For weeks this circus has been in line of preparation. Now it is an accomplished fact and the shows this afternoon and evening have demonstrated that when Jamesville society people want to divert themselves it means fun for everybody.

Warren V. Wheeler is in charge of the transportation and through his efforts the cars ran on the new track, had this past week, to Magnolia ave. where buses and the crowds who drove to the grounds where all sorts of amusements offered themselves. One of the features was the circus parade before each performance that was a sight to behold in make-up and arrangement.

The side shows did a bustling business and young and old enjoyed the numerous stunts that the members of the club gave for the benefit of the public. The affair continues this evening when doubtless a large number of town people will be present.

POLICE SEEK MAN WHO PASSED CHECKS

May Have Trace of Man Who Purchased Suit of Clothes From Ziegler's Saturday Giving Valueless Check.

Chief of Police Appleby stated today that he believed he had trace of the stranger who visited this city Saturday and passed worthless checks on a Beloit bank, securing at the Ziegler store a suit of clothes and hat worth $25.

The man visited the Ziegler store shortly after noon and bargained for a suit which he picked out and promised to return later in the afternoon and call for the same. He asked Mr. Connors, manager of the store, where would be a good place to buy a pair of shoes. He visited the Luby shoe store after that and picked out a pair of $5 shoes, which he paid for with a check on a Beloit bank. He left the shoes for stretching and promised to return. Mr. Luby was rather suspicious and visited a local bank who called up the Beloit institution and found that the signer of the check, F. G. Gorst, had no account there. Consequently the man was denied the shoes on his return.

He returned to Ziegler's at half past six o'clock and issued another check in payment for the clothes. He stated that he was the man who had charge of Judge Ross's farm in Beloit and that it was all right. The check was taken and he made away with the clothes. It is stated that he took a carriage at the Myers corner, but that he got out at Jackson street, probably to return to take the seven o'clock Interurban car for Beloit or Rockford. It was subsequent to this that Mr. Connors received information that the same fellow had visited the Luby store and had been found to be a forger.

The police had been informed of the man by Mr. Luby but know nothing of the sale at Ziegler's until after the man had left the city. Communication with Judge Ross brought out the fact that the man had been at his home the night before after a job, but that as he had been too talkative he had been denied employment.

The police are now working on clues which are calculated to land the crook within a short time.

COUNCIL MEETING TO BE ADJOURNED

Meeting Night Falling on Legal Holiday Will Doubtless Result in Adjourning Until Tuesday Night.

Tonight is the time set for the regular meeting of the common council, but Labor Day being a legal holiday, it is not likely that any business will be transacted this evening. In case a quorum is present at eight o'clock this evening, all that will be done, undoubtedly, will be to call the meeting to another date, presumably Tuesday night. This method of procedure is generally followed when the meeting night falls on a legal holiday.

Among the matters of business to be taken up by the city fathers when they assemble for work will be to accept the plans and specifications for the improvement of North Academy street from West Milwaukee street to the tracks of the Chicago and Northwestern railway and order the work done. The contract between the city and the Palmer Memorial Hospital association for the care of emergency cases in the city, has been signed by the hospital authorities and this will probably be accepted. Bids from local coat dealers to furnish fuel for heating the buildings owned by the city will be opened. The reports of the board of education and the municipal court for the month of August will be presented for approval.

The Wolf Spider.

The female of the curiously named wolf spider lays its eggs and immediately covers them with a soft silken covering. No matter where she goes she will carry these covered eggs about with her, and she will, if necessary, sacrifice her life to protect the eggs or the young, which, soon after they are hatched, she carries on her back while she gathers food for herself and the little ones. They remain holding to their mother's back until they are almost as large as their parent, when they seem suddenly to discover their strength, and, unnatural as it would seem, they set upon their mother, and in a short time kill and devour her.—Harper's Weekly.

Strange Sight of Ants.

It was proved long ago that ants have the power of seeing the—human beings—Invisible rays of the ultra-violet portion of the spectrum. They fear the light for their larvae and when allowed choice between different degrees of light always carry them to the darkest place accessible. When given the choice between a compartment lighted with yellow light and one dark to human eyes, but under the netlike ray, the ants unhesitatingly choose the yellow light, showing that to their eyes it is darker than the other, to man invisible.

Blanchington, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Reviewing the progress of organized labor in America, here today, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Confederation of Labor, declared the only way capital is now trying to win on labor is by misrepresentation. After citing statistics to show the growth of the labor movement, he said in part: "In an open and fair contest before the bar of public opinion, even with an unfair press, the cause of labor has steadily advanced. With the full knowledge of this antagonistic association of employers given with desperation having no regard for the inherent rights of man, or any form of law, are seeking by various means to destroy the organizations of labor. To make false and criminal charges with no mode appears to be the method they are employing."

Morrison referred to the McNamara case.

In New York.

New York, Sept. 4.—Every organized trade in this city was represented in a great parade, today, the big feature of New York's observation of Labor's holiday. Every marcher was required to either show union cards or portions of clothing bearing union labels if allowed in line.

In Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Labor Day parades were dispensed with in Chicago today, the huge sum usually spent to be applied to the defense fund of the McNamara brothers, charged with dynamiting the Los Angeles Times.

In Davenport.

Davenport, Ia., Sept. 4.—Chump Clark, speaker of the house of representatives, was boomed as the democratic nominee for president, by speakers at a Labor Day picnic on Solaham Island in the Mississippi river, a mile below here, today. Union workmen from this city, Marine and Rock Island, Ill., enthusiastically helped launch the boom, and loudly applauded Speaker Clark's address in reply.

Glory.

How many metals make the bronze of Corinth? Insists on boards or on paper, the spot of ink or charcoal or mud, the dress of heart, of mind and of body, the dirt of calamity, all these, under the sun, dry, harden, turn into bronze solid and brilliant—a pure bronze, which is called glory!—Cattelle Mendes.

REPORTED POPE AGAIN ILL

However, There Seems to Be Little Reason for Anxiety.

Rome, Sept. 4.—Reports are again in circulation regarding the ill health of the pope, but there seems little reason for anxiety. The pope is suffering from a slight swelling of the left knee, but this has required no special treatment. His holiness celebrated mass, walked in the Vatican gardens, conversed with his sister and niece, and had a long conversation with Cardinal Ferreri. He showed no evidences of indisposition.

We are publishing this extraordinary page of specials

This paper has been studying for some time past the relative importance, interest and appeal the "advertising" of a modern paper should bear to the other "news" set forth in its columns.

(The result is staggering—and to the reporter and editorial pride.)

It has forcibly come to us that, what interests the world most today and has most interested them since the world began, is summed up in—

WHAT TO EAT—WHAT TO WEAR—WHAT TO HAVE IN THE HOME—HOW TO BEST SPEND MONEY TO PROMOTE THE MOST PLEASURE AND HAPPINESS AND COMFORT.

Compared with these great points which vitally concern humanity, the lesser happenings of life are but incidents.

And the person best qualified to interest the people of this city in these matters of most moment are by all means the merchants—the men who are in touch with the world's markets—who know what is being done in the new discoveries and origination of merchandise and food stuffs, to raise standards of living or change modes and styles.

Do the people of this city really appreciate this great truth? Do the merchants appreciate it themselves, is a question this paper has been asking itself and also the question—

HOW CAN THIS PAPER HELP bring a closer confidence and sense of mutual understanding and benefit between advertiser and the public?

In answer to this question THIS PAPER HAS SET ASIDE THIS SPACE for one day each week and has asked the merchants of this city to contribute

(What in their opinion will be their (one) most appealing bargain.)

Moreover, we mean to devote this space one day each week to announcing these "best" bargains. We also mean to protect our merchants and our readers in the sincerity of all offerings, and so we will appoint a competent shopping committee to each week inspect all "best" bargain offerings and decide which is the ONE BEST BARGAIN OF ALL the decision of the committee to be published in the ad of the week following the insertion of the "best bargains."

45 Merchants Have Responded—some with price cuts, some with "new arrivals," some with style novelties, some with unique originations, some with offerings possessing more than ordinary appeal to eye, palate, or ear.

This Ad is Bound to Contain many things to interest and appeal to every reader of this paper—many needed items at a big saving, many wanted things, many new suggestions; and so, even if you haven't a need, desire or wish unfulfilled at the present time, the reading of this ad and the succeeding ads will be well worth your while in developing your discernment, just for the interest and satisfaction of determining in advance in your own mind the "bargain" which the committee will select as "best," your faculty for picking out real bargains when you see them and also because these announcements from every point of view are bound to make

The most interesting reading of any page in today's paper

J. M. BOSTWICK & SONS

Were awarded the "Best Bargain" honor for last week by the committee of ladies from the United Brethren church. The offer of 12-4 blankets, regular $1.50 value, for $1.00, was a splendid bargain and was unanimously decided by the committee that this offer merited the reward.

Was this the bargain you decided was best last week?

Did you read and respond to that bargain page—you certainly missed the most interesting reading in the paper if you happened to overlook it—But here is another—just as brimful of interest to you—read every special—perhaps the very item you need most is set forth here the most extraordinary offering on the page.

The Committee this week consists of three ladies from the Ess an bee Society of the Presbyterian Church

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

ARENT you too hard on your own sex, Miss Cameron?" So one of my reader friends questions me. I wonder.

It is a new point of view on myself, to me. But really I don't think I am.

To be sure I may point out feminine follies more frequently and forcibly than I do the masculine but that's only as a man could tell you the weak points and inconveniences of the house in which he lives better than those of a neighbor's house.

I assure you, I do not find more fault with my sex, because I think they have more faults.

Not by any means.

Please attend, Mrs. Critic, while I try to vindicate myself from your criticism.

I know five obstinate men to one obstinate woman.

I know ten overwhelmingly conceited men to one extremely conceited woman.

The very pretty, unusually attractive girl may think that every man is ready to fall in love with her and not be so very far out of the way, either.

But almost every man, however homely, however stupid, however unattractive, fancies himself an all powerful lady killer.

As Elmer Glynne put it: "It does not matter what the size of a man is, his vanity is just the same. A shrimp of five feet is unable to understand why a lovely goddess does not drop like a ripe peach into his lovely arms."

I know five egotistical men to one egotistical woman.

I know five families where the pathway of some sort of creation must be paved into smoothness by the inconveniences and comfort sacrifices of the feminine members of the family, to one where the case is reversed.

The contrast between man's fidelity and woman's fidelity is too much a truism to need mention.

On the other hand, it seems to me that women are seldom as broad minded as men, almost never as ultralistic, as interested in the good of humanity in general.

They are naturally more petty and inclined to cast the first stone, and they seldom have much sense of business honor.

Women, I think, are more jealous after marriage, men before.

Women are more patient in small things, men in large.

Men are more just; women more merciful.

There, perhaps I am still under indictment, but I hope not for I have truly tried to borrow a masculine virtue and be neither hard on my own sex nor the other, but simply "just" to both.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

THE DARTMOOR MASSACRE.

By A. W. MACY.

At the close of the war of 1812 England held 6,000 Americans as prisoners, confined at Dartmoor, in Devonshire. Of these 3,500 were soldiers captured in battle, and 2,500 were seamen. The latter had been impressed by British cruisers and refused to serve on English ships, on the ground that they were American sailors. Some of them had been imprisoned for ten years or more. Peace was declared in December, 1814, but the prisoners did not hear of it till March. When the news finally reached them of course they were greatly elated, and expected to be set at liberty very shortly. As day after day passed with no sign of release they became restive. They demanded better food and better treatment, and when these were refused they showed signs of insubordination. One day the guards fired on the prisoners, killing five and wounding thirty-three. What was still more exasperating, the British government pronounced the act justifiable. When news of "the Dartmoor massacre" reached this country there was great indignation, and no wonder. John Bull probably would think twice and count a hundred before doing such a thing now.

Hint for Mothers

THREE illustrations are interesting and useful to mothers, including as they do a coat and skirt costume, a school dress and a long useful coat.

The coat and skirt costume is carried out in this model, in pale gray tweed, and is made in a simple but pretty style with gored skirt and a double-breasted coat, fastened with two-covered buttons.

The school dress is made of navy blue serge with plaited bodice and skirt cut all together and confined at the waist by a black belt. The waist has a box plait in front which is ornamented with two rows of small gilt buttons. The neck and sleeves are finished with white turn-over collar and cuffs, trimmed with feather stitching and lace.

The coat is of brown cheviot serge made with stitched plaits on either side, both front and back, and has a stitched belt which crosses in front and fastens with one button. Similar button ornament the coat. The turn-over collar and cuffs are of plait brown cloth. All three will be found highly serviceable costumes.

PICKLING TIME.

Do not delay putting down some tender little cucumber pickles for winter use. Here is a recipe, easy to prepare, and most successful in results:

Mushroom Catsup.—When mushrooms are plenty in the cool fall mornings, gather a basket full, look them over carefully to see that none are wormy, and put them in a large-mouthed jar in layers, with salt between. Don't be too generous with the salt, or you will spoil the catsup. Let them stand in a warm place twenty-four hours covered with a towel. The next day wash and strain them through a coarse sieve. To every quart of the liquor add an ounce of pepper corns and cook a half hour, then add one-fourth of an ounce of cloves, half an ounce of ginger root, one dozen whole cloves, three blades of mace and cook fifteen minutes. Take from the fire and strain again; reheat, fill small bottles and dip the cork in wax to seal. The housewife who does not feel that she can afford to have these delicacies when bought from the grocery, will be able, at little expense to put them up, have them for herself and a few bottles for her friends.

The canned sweet red pepper is such an addition to so many dishes and in the fall when they may be had from your own garden a few cans will be easily put up. This is a tried recipe of Miss Farmer's, and one only has to use the right proportions to have success: Wash and cut the stems from a peck of red peppers, remove the seeds and cut the peppers in thin rings, round and round with the scissors. Plunge into boiling water and let stand two minutes, drain and plunge into ice water. Let stand ten minutes, drain and pack into glass jars. Roll one quart of vinegar and two cups of sugar fifteen minutes. Pour over the peppers to overflow the jars, seal and keep in a cool place.

Hair of Brains?
A young man of ability, but of meek and mild appearance, applied for a position in a draper's counting house, and the salary he asked was eighty pounds per annum. The principal seemed astonished at the sum asked by so youthful a person, and said: "Just step this way." And pointing to an old man with white hair and a long beard, he continued: "That gentleman is only receiving the sum you asked." "Oh, well," said the young fellow, "if you take hair for brains I will say good-morning, sir." His answer obtained him the appointment.—London Telegraph.

Traffic on Detroit River.
Domestic freight traffic by way of the Detroit river last year was 67,599,922 short tons, exceeding the 1909 traffic by over 5,000,000 tons. Of this, 44,371,813 tons represented the south-bound and 23,088,109 tons the north-bound movement.

Chinese Doctor's Hard Luck.
Following translation from a local native newspaper appeared in a recent number of the Central Post. It would seem that medical practice in China is sometimes attended with drawbacks. "A wealthy man whose young child was sick called in the doctor, who medicated the child until it died. The father in a rage engaged ten stalwart coolies to go to the doctor's house and destroy everything in it, besides giving him a good beating in it. They had not been gone very long when they returned, so the wealthy man asked how they had polished him off so soon. The stalwarts replied: 'By the time we got there a band of men sent by another patient had already smashed up the house and beaten the doctor.'"

Daily Thought.

No man can justly censure or condemn another, because indeed no man truly knows another. This I perceive in myself; for I am in the dark to all the world, and my nearest friends behold me but in a cloud.—Sir Thomas Browne.

Vegetables Neglected.

Broccoli and cauliflower came from Cyprus in the seventeenth century, and the potato, brought to England by Sir Walter Raleigh about 1584, was not in general use until 1663, when the royal society directed attention to it and recommended its cultivation.

Thought for Today

By MRS. ROBERT N. LAPOLETTE.

WHAT wonder the modern young mother is often in despair lest she make an irreparable mistake in the bringing up of her children. Doctors of philosophy, who specialize in child study, differ in diagnosis and prescription as the proverbial doctors of medicine. It is a delicate question, and I offer an opinion, not as an authority, but as a woman,—far from infallible,—who has pondered long on the question.

My idea is, instead of thinking anxiously all the while of all the things we can do for our children, and being constantly on the alert to direct them in every act, we should give consideration to how much they can best learn unconsciously; and instead of lying awake nights in fear we are not bringing them up according to the latest and best methods, we should discipline ourselves to hold our hands off and leave them as much as we can, to think and act and do for themselves.

It may be a mother should know where her children are, and what they are doing, but the children should not feel this watchfulness. A cut lot's her kittens play apparently unmindful of what they are about until there is actual need of interference. The advantage of being one of a large family in moderate circumstances is that the mother has too much to occupy her hands and mind to give needless attention to her children's every move.

Freedom to exercise the will and act independently is as fundamental to the healthy growth and development of the young, as nourishing food and abundance of fresh air. "Tied to mother's apron strings" is a narrow, depressing, joyless childhood, no matter how dear and beautiful the mother. Father give them rope, lots and lots of rope—all they can use—more and more as they learn to use it. And when there is positive need to make it taut, just a little give and take in drawing the slack usually answers the purpose better than a sudden pull.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

By BARBARA BOYD

For An Evening's Entertainment.

MOST people like to talk. And an evening of spirited conversation in which each feels he has taken his part well, leaves all with the agreeable sensation of having had a good time. Therefore if any little coterie of friends, who wish to plan out some entertainment for the winter, will give an evening each week or fortnight or month, as time permits, to discussion, they will find that it will prove one of the most enjoyable evenings of the winter's round of pleasure.

Such a course is being planned by a little circle fond of discussion. They intend to take up plays of the day that turn upon ethical questions, and thresh the subject out at their meetings. The first play to be discussed is Galsworthy's "Justice," the play which brought about so many reforms in the English prison system. Some of the questions that will be brought up for discussion are: "Should penitentiaries be places of punishment or of moral education?" "How far are criminals patients?" "Is crime a preventable disease?" "Are people responsible for weak wills?"

As can be seen such questions will lead to much spirited discussion, and into many interesting side issues. Scarcely any one but has some opinions on these matters, and as has been said, it is always enjoyable to express one's opinion. And such an evening makes for mental growth and a wider outlook, and this also brings pleasure. So that an evening passed this way cannot fail to be enjoyable.

Some of the other plays to be discussed are Galsworthy's "Strife," Ibsen's "The Enemy of the People," Shaw's "Widower's Houses," Suderman's "Magda." It is proposed that some one shall give a brief summary of the play for the benefit of those who may not have read it or seen it. But these summaries must simply be a statement of the facts. It must not be biased or prejudiced in any way.

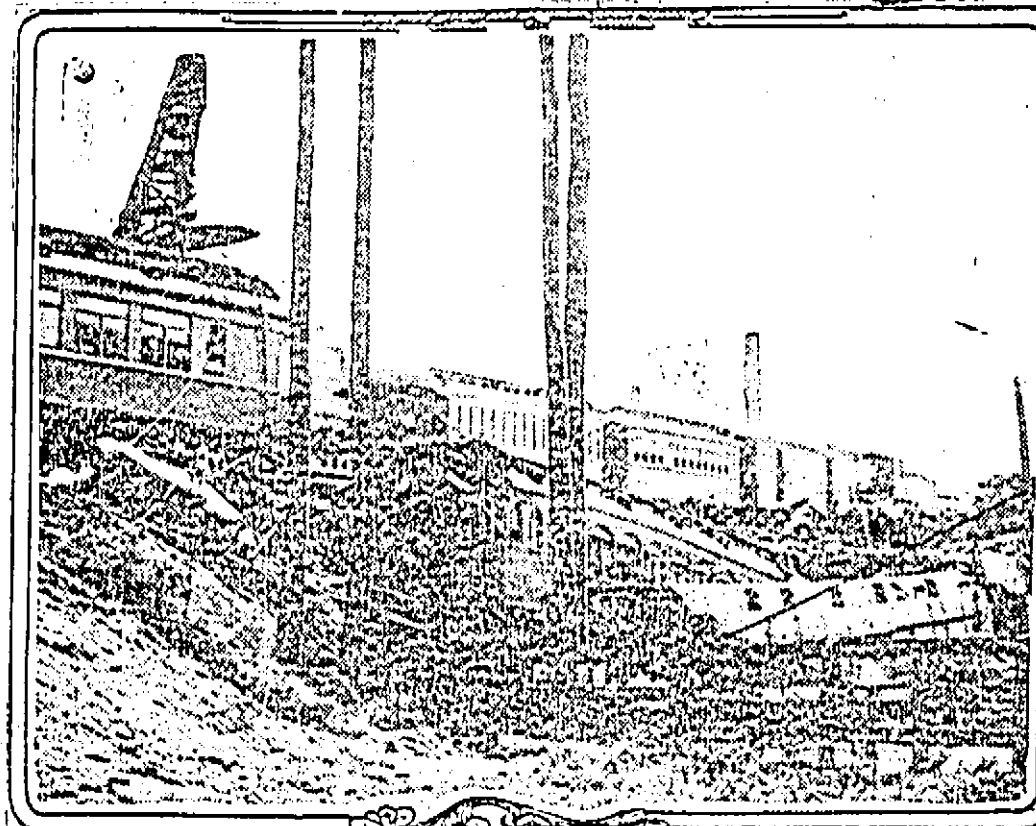

Books could be taken up instead of plays, if preferred; or for that matter, any questions of the day that have a vital place in life.

Those who like lighter entertainment might not care for this. But even these would find that an evening now and then passed in this way would be more enjoyable than they imagined. And the young person who is shy and not able to discover anything to talk about in general company will find this one of the best methods of overcoming her shyness, and becoming at ease in society. When she is given a subject to talk about, she can usually talk, and she will become so interested that she will forget self-consciousness and diffidence; and before she knows it they will have vanished and she will be at ease anywhere.

Sanguinary.
"Now that you have seen the stockyards butcher at their busy work," said the professor, who was showing his visitor around the town, "and have had a good look at State and Madison streets, our main business arteries, just for a change we'll go and see the city veins." "Its veins?" "Yes; the residence districts, where the blue blood is."—Chicago Record-Herald.

One of Fashion's Follies.
A lady came on an odd-looking bag the other day in one of the fashionable London shops. It was an expensive leather, and seemed too large for an ordinary handbag; also it had a curious opening cut at one side towards the top. "Ladies use it for carrying their little dogs," the salesman explained.

FATHER REILLY GIVES INSTRUCTIVE SERMON

NEW ASSISTANT PASTOR AT ST. PATRICK'S REMINDS A LARGE AUDIENCE OF THE BENEFITS OF FREQUENT CONFESSION.

NECESSITY OF LIGHT

Light is the Best Policeman, Not Only For a City, But Also for a Soul and Its Light Can be Secured in the Sacrament of Penance.

That Rev. Father Reilly, the new assistant pastor at St. Patrick's church is winning friends among his new parishioners, especially by the interesting and instructive sermons was evidenced yesterday by the large crowd in attendance at the 10:30 Mass which he celebrated.

His sermon of yesterday, the thirteenth Sunday after Pentecost, was on the Gospel of St. Luke, Chap. XVII., verses, 11 to 19, in which is related the story of the ten lepers who were healed of their dreaded disease after following the advice of the Lord to "Go show yourselves to the priests."

"Under the Jewish dispensation the people were required to present themselves to the high priests occasionally to procure certificates of bodily cleanliness," said Father Reilly, "and under the new law we are likewise commanded to present ourselves to the priests but for a somewhat different purpose. Under the Jewish law bodily cleanliness was considered a symbol of spiritual purity and those who were afflicted with a loathsome disease, like leprosy, were looked upon as unclean spiritually."

"When the ten lepers approached the Savior and cried, 'Jesus, Master, have mercy on us,' they felt as did the others who had just then come out from society that their souls were stained with sin. Having heard of the wonderful miracles that were being performed by Jesus, they had faith in Him and sought from Him forgiveness for their offenses, feeling confident that if the same were granted their bodily impurities would at the same time disappear. Instead of healing them as He could easily have done if he so desired, Jesus wished to test their faith and told them 'Go show yourselves to the priests.' They went at once to do as they were directed and even as they were on the way to the priests their bodies were healed."

"Under the new dispensation we are likewise commanded to present ourselves to the priests not for a cleansing of the body but rather to have the soul cleansed of its sin. As Jesus spoke these words, 'Go show yourselves to the priests,' they were intended for us as well as for the poor lepers who were before Him. It is not for the purpose of cleansing our bodies but in order to have our souls clean and pure which He considered the most acceptable offering to Him. He saw the futility of the practices of the Jews. He knew that while their bodies were clean their souls were blackened and defiled and He considered them as 'whitened sepulchres.'"

"Blessed are the pure of heart," is the keynote of the lesson to be drawn from this parable of today's Gospel. And in order that we may keep our hearts pure and acceptable to our Savior it is our duty to present ourselves to the priests very often in the confessional and by the merits of the Sacrament of Penance, to secure for our hearts the certificate of spiritual purity. The duty of the priests in this regard is imposed in the words of our Lord when He said to His disciples 'Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, and whose sins they shall forgive they are forgiven them.'"

"When the priests exhort you to go often to the Sacrament of Penance, it is not because the task is an easy one for them. The task of hearing confession is one of the most disagreeable that a priest must perform. He, too, as well as any one of his parishioners must confess his sins and humble himself just as each one of you is required to do. His purpose in reminding you of this duty is rather to insure to you that purity of heart which is necessary for the true Christian. He knows that through his instrumentality our Savior who has commissioned him for this task, will bring light to the sin-stained soul. Through him as the agent, the Lord will bring to the penitent soul in the confessional that light and purity before which sin and impurities of the spirit will disappear."

In closing Father Reilly reminded his hearers how in the beginning of the city "Light is the best policeman" and that the same rule will hold true with regard to their own hearts and souls. He advised them to take advantage frequently of the opportunity they have to renew that necessary light to their spirit by means of the Sacrament of Penance, advising parents to set the example for their children and teach them the good to be derived from this and from partaking frequently of the Sacrament of Communion.

NOTES FOR CITY FARMERS ONLY.

(By H. L. RANN.)

The practice of dehorning as usually carried out is needlessly cruel. The best method is to have the horns extracted by a painless dentist, who will draw them while you wait at $1.00 per horn. The holder which has inhaled a couple of bags of laughing gas while in the dentist's chair will never kick anybody's front teeth loose again.

Here is a little item which is worthy of consideration, if you are fattening cattle for market: Just before weighing in feed a generous quantity of yeast foam and apples. Be careful not to overdo it, or the buyer may think you have been entertaining an epidemic of the dropsy.

Don't expect the hired girl to clean herself on a wire rope every time she hangs out the wash. Buy one of those graceful family turnstiles, with force feed and self-lubrication. Next to a bottle of some approved colic remedy this is the greatest convenience that can be placed in any home. More hired girls have become shoulder bound in the attempt to wrap a lofty clothes line than from any other cause.

The poultry keeper who ornaments his henery with the Brahma rooster is stupid. This bird requires only two hours' sleep per day, and he generally takes this from 7:00 to 9:00 in the morning. He usually turns his voice loose about 2:00 a. m., and by six o'clock he is so hoarse that he sounds like an expiring corn sheller. The Brahma can be heard for six miles on a still day when in good voice, and his conversation becomes extremely monotonous. He is a large, raw-boned bird, with a crop capacity of four full quarts, and is the only substitute for the windmill on the farm. He makes about as delicious a dinner dish as a stewed sidesaddle.

CASCARETS FOR A SICK, SOUR STOMACH Gently but thoroughly cleanse and regulate your Stomach, Liver and Bowels while you sleep.

That useful, harmless, healing of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach; the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means indigestion; a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they cure indigestion, because they immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended forever. A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a decent box from any drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little hidden need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

Locate in the Land of Sunshine
Polk County, Minnesota
In the Famous Red River Valley

The richest land in the world. Where they want the actual settler. Where there are no swamps, no swamp land, no stones, no drouths. Where there are good homes, good markets and land can be bought at reasonable prices.

There is plenty of land in Polk county to give homes and farms to many times the number of farmers that are at present residents, and to the progressive and up-to-date practical farmer there is no section of the country that can hold more attractions or offer greater possibilities than this country.

The idea has grown in some people's minds that the Red River Valley is low and wet. This is an erroneous impression as such is not the case. The State of Minnesota has put in several large ditches, and the Counties in the Valley, have put in smaller ditches, all to take care of this surface water, which they have in the Spring, owing to the fact that this particular valley is drained by the Red River of the North, which of course, flowing north, does not flow at the mouth as early as it does at the source, thus causing the water to back up, and in the past, overflow the land.

By having these ditches the water backs up into them, instead of overflowing the land, and thus relieves this country of what was at one time, a very serious drawback to early cropping of the land.

Come in and see me, and if after investigating my proposition you find that everything is not just as I represent it to you, I will refund your railroad fare both ways. Is this not a fair offer?

NO MAN'S LAND A ROMANCE

"Then tell me," Don't tell me that!"

"What does Mr. Blackstock say?"

"I haven't interviewed him, of course. I seemed too absurd."

"Why?"

The only report he had at command was pitifully inadequate: "Because I love you."

"Is that any reason why Mr. Blackstock should not?"

"There are reasons why you shouldn't let your name be coupled with his."

"And they are—?"

She put it crisply. His heart sank, foreseeing defeat. He veered at a tangent, evasive. "You haven't answered me. Is there any truth in this rumor?"

"Not yet."

"You mean it may be true—later?"

"It's possible," she affirmed coolly. "Mr. Blackstock has asked me to marry him; he hasn't as yet had my answer."

"Katherine! . . . You can't really care for him?"

"I'm trying to be sure, Garrett, before I tell him so—or you."

"But—but you mustn't! . . . The thing's impossible. . . . You—"

"You'll tell me why?"

Her composure was sobering. He got himself more in hand; she was not to be moved by storming, he knew. Reason, logic, an appeal to her intelligence; she would require these of him. Yet when put to it he could not bring himself to tell what he knew of the man by hearsay, if very creditably. Personal defects, lack of breeding, and the like were all unstable objections. . . . In the end the best he could do, since some sort of an answer was essential, was to frame a halting, inconclusive: "He's not the sort."

She misinterpreted his confusion. "I know what you're thinking: that he's not a spoke in our particular social wheel; an outsider. Must I condemn him for that? Are there no right men, Garrett, but yourself and others of our 'set'?" I know he has his lacks; I fancy you'd call him crude, if you were candid with me. But men of his genius, his upbringing . . . Not that I concede any crudity in him; it's hardly that; he merely lacks—something—difficult to name it; not cultivation, not sensibility, but, I'd say, friends."

"He has many."

So she cared enough to fight for him! There was bitterness, surpassing the bitterness of sleep, in that discovery.

"I mean the right kind, yourself, for instance; friends to bring him out. He's quick, adaptable, of a good family—if not a wealthy one."

Coast fell back upon the one mentionable objection of which he had certain knowledge. "He's got a villainous temper."

"Friends would teach him to control it. And there are excuses for that: his slight—his eyes are in a bad way. He injured them seriously, somehow, in his work—something about the spark, I believe."

"Those wireless experiments of his?"

"Yes. He's going to do great things, Garrett."

"Late in the field."

"He leads it today; they all look to him. His inventions, discoveries, improvements, will make wireless as everyday a thing as the telephone. I don't mean he couldn't win without friends; he's strong enough."

"Men have little use for him, Katherine."

"Women have."

Coast struggled temptation. . . . "He has magnetism."

"That and strength, ambition, enthusiasm. He's worth being a friend to. I want you to know him better, to like him, Garrett."

After a little he managed to say: "I'll try, if you wish."

"I do wish. Please, Garrett."

"Then I'm to understand you seriously contemplate marrying him?"

"Her 'Yes!' was absolute."

"Don't you see—he hated himself for this—his after your money, Katherine?"

"Garrett, that is unworthy of you."

He said nothing, doggedly taking what comfort he might from the knowledge that he was right.

Gradually he comprehended that in the course of their conversation the car had left Fifth Avenue at the Plaza and was crossing Central Park at the Seventy-second Street entrance.

"We're near the gate," he said abruptly. "If you'll drop me there, please—"

"Certainly. Tell Patrick."

Coast groped for the speaking tube and communicated with the driver. When he sat back he was conscious of the woman's softening regard.

"You're not angry, Katherine?"

"No, Garrett; but I'm very, very sorry."

"If I've seemed presumptuous—"

"To me, Garrett? Can you remember the time when we were not friends?"

"No. . . . I want you to understand that it wasn't altogether because I want you myself—need you, because I love you—as you know—have loved you for years. . . . It was jealousy of your happiness. I said nothing that I didn't believe."

"I know. But you were—mistaken. You'll come to understand."

"I don't want you to make a mistake. Wait, Katherine, wait a little before deciding. I'm sure of your heart; it won't misguide you."

"I believe not. I know my heart and mind."

"You know mine," he said gently, and no more.

That stabbed her; she winced, wondering why. But the personality of Douglas Blackstock stood forth so clearly, lined in such vivid coloring, in the foreground of her consciousness, that there was left little room, even for old friends such as Garrett Coast.

A foot, Coast lingered at the door, keen eyes searching hers almost plaintively.

"I'll drop in for tea tomorrow, if you ask me, Katherine."

"Have you ever needed an invitation, Garrett?"

"Then I'll come."

He nodded to the driver and the car swept away.

Long after it had shot out of sight, he stood staring. Then discovering himself bareheaded, hat and stick in hand, an object of amused regard, with a curt laugh of confusion and awakened self-consciousness, he turned back through the park.

CHAPTER II.

Resigning with little reluctance his place at the card table to Dundas, whose turn it was to cut in, Coast lighted a cigarette and wandered round the dining-room of Blackstock's apartment, idly inspecting the half-dozen hunting-prints that adorned the green burletap walls.

Unspeakingly bored, he went to the buffet, where he poured a very little Scotch into a tall glass, drowning it with icy charged water. He had refused to drink up to that moment, and was thirsty, but as he sat sipping and watching the players, Van Tuyl's unnatural pallor, moist hair and fixed smile affected him with a faint disgust, and he put the glass aside, not half-emptied. His brows knitted in his concern for the man, who had been drinking heavily and would pursue that madness until satiated or sodden; no influence that Coast knew of would restrain him; he was as unmanageable as a wild horse, and as spirited.

Slender, graceful, high lord of Devil-may-Care, Van Tuyl sober was limble, more loved than feared in spite of, perhaps because of, the wit he wielded like a whip-lash. Excuses fanned that brilliancy to a burning frenzy; at such times he knew no friends, and those who knew him avoided him; his wit, submerged, frothed with a satiric humor that etched as indelibly as an acid when he did not lay on with a bludgeon of vituperation. . . . A dangerous foil to Blackstock, Coast thought, comparing them, wondering that they were so much together. Contrasting them he thought: fire and low, rapier and broadsword!

Blackstock was the broadsword of that comparison, heavy and cumbersome if capable. Without an effort he dominated the others. Van Tuyl always excepted; the sheer weight of Blackstock's personality forced them into the background. Little Dundas, with his deferential smile, delicately pink face and permanently rounded shoulders, seemed the veriest shadow of a man; Blackstock's shadow he had apparently constituted himself. Truax, round of face and blandly practical, if unquestionably independent, was only less dwarfed by his host.

"A good bridge!" Blackstock in the current slang; giving himself wholly to the game, playing to win, "willing the tricks," Van Tuyl told him.

The comment brought a drollish smile to the man's face.

"What do you want me to do with 'em?" he growled semi-humorously, slipping a card from his hand and as swiftly making his play from dummy. "Make you a present of 'em?"

Play to that now, come through with that ten-spot! He chuckled as he gathered in the trick and led the final card from dummy. "That'll teach you to double my original make, I guess. . . . Game and rubber, Dunny; six without, doubled, and a little slam. Got that down?"

"Yes," replied Dundas, grinning feebly as he jotted down the score.

"Tough luck, partner," Truax observed to Van Tuyl. "You couldn't help doubling on your hand, of course, and equally of course I had to be chicaned in hearts."

"Brains, rather," observed Van Tuyl blandly, smiling.

Blackstock interposed hastily. "That fourth-best spade of yours certainly did lead him up to slaughter." He reached over and took up the deck at Truax's elbow, spreading the cards with a dextrous sweep of his strong, blunt fingers. "New game. Cut, you fellows."

"The invitation tempts; but there are some skins too thick. . . . Van Tuyl pursued."

Truax pushed back his chair, nodding cheerfully to Coast. But for a heightened tint of color he showed no trace of being aware of Van Tuyl's insolence. "Cut in, Garrett; it's your turn."

"Unless," he added, "you'll want to quit. It's pretty late. I think I'll drop, for one."

"Drop," said Van Tuyl sweetly, "and be damned."

"What do you mean by that?" Truax, on his feet, turned upon his tormentor with an imperceptible tremor in his voice.

Prudence is the better part of bridge, Van Tuyl explained carefully. "He's a prudent man who becomes conscious of chilled extremities when ahead of the game."

Crismen with resentment, Truax hesitated, the retort on the tip of his tongue only withheld because of Coast's appealing and sympathetic look. Then with a lift of his plump shoulders he turned away, nodding to his host, Dundas and Coast.

"Good-night," he said brusquely, and so betrayed the effort his self-control cost him. "You'll all send your checks if I am anything ahead."

"We'll try not to forget, thanks," a satiric smile on Van Tuyl's thin lips winged the Partisan dart.

Truax did not reply, but left the room abruptly, Blackstock accompanying him to the door. In his absence Coast cut in as Van Tuyl's partner and took the chair Truax had just vacated.

"Deal!" he inquired.

"Yours," Dundas told him.

"And," Van Tuyl interjected as Coast took up the cards, "let us trust you've more bridge sense than that professional dummy." He nodded to indicate the departing Truax. "I carefully told him, early in the evening, that when I doubled I wanted not his highest heart, but the highest card of his weakest suit. Do you think you can remember that?"

"Yes," said Coast shortly, annoyed by the other's offensive manner.

"I sincerely trust so. I didn't come here to be fooled by everybody, by incompetent partners included."

Coast quietly put down the cards without completing the deal. "Aren't you spraining something in your attempts to be insolent, Van?" he inquired as Blackstock reappeared. "It happens I've been your partner this evening more frequently than anybody else."

"Precisely."

"And you think yourself justified in suggesting that I've played against you?"

Van Tuyl's dark eyes met his steadily in a sardonic stare. "I'm the heaviest loser here," he said. "You've played like a raw amateur every time you've played with me. Interpret that to your liking."

"I shall." Coast got up, white to the lips. "It spells good-night to me."

Blackstock struck in with a heavy note of insouciance. "Oh, come now! It's early yet. Van doesn't know what he's saying."

It was Van Tuyl's turn to rise; he accomplished the action with surprising dignity if with a slight unsteadiness. "Since when did I appoint a bounder like you to read my meaning?" he asked crisply.

Blackstock hesitated, swaying a little as his temper strained at the leash. "I'll take that from you in your present condition, Van Tuyl," he said slowly.

In his nervous anxiety to avert the quarrel, little Dundas blundered and precipitated it. "Oh, say now!" he said slowly.

"Brains, rather," observed Van Tuyl blandly.

plied. "We're all good friends. Don't let's us along one another. Come on, Van Tuyl—let's have a drink and make up."

At the suggestion Van Tuyl's weathered face beamed. "All right," he assented; "that listens like sense." He turned to the buffet, Dundas with him.

"Good-night, Blackstock," Coast offered his hand. "I'm off now."

"Why . . . good-night," Blackstock's mouth smiled, but his speech was mechanical and his eyes, slightly prominent and magnified by thick lenses, met Coast's with an opaque look singularly suggesting a cat. "I'm sorry our party has to break up so early—"

"Look here!" Van Tuyl swung round with a glass half-full of raw Scotch in his hand. "Aren't you going to join us?"

"Thank you, no," said Coast dryly. "No," said Blackstock. "And," he added, "if I were you, Van, I'd chop that drink. It won't do you a world of good."

"Oh!" Van Tuyl smiled acidly. "Don't you know I reserve the privilege of acting as my own wet-nurse?"

"I advised you as a friend, and I'm willing to push the trespasser and tell you something you evidently don't know, Van Tuyl; drink makes you ugly."

Coast, lingering in anxiety, detected suddenly the gleam of drink-insanity in Van Tuyl's eyes. Alarmed, he moved to place himself between the men, and in the act received full in the face what had been intended for Blackstock—the contents of Van Tuyl's glass.

Thought Fast Benefited Him.

Professor Mayor of Cambridge University, who died a short time ago at the age of 86, decided to fast on a progressive scale for the last 48 days, while completing his last work, an edition of Juvenal. For the first week he was to eat every other day, for the next every fourth day, and for the last fortnight nothing at all. He carried out his program till the beginning of the last week, when the doctors compelled him to take food. After it was all over he said: "I never in all my life felt so well or so eager for work, and I am convinced that I should have suffered no harm by persevering with it."

Had to Drown Eagle.

One of the incidents of the last season in Dead river region that escaped press notice at the time, was the fact that William Legyard of Boston and Albert Leavering of New York, then guests at Round Mountain camp, attempted to capture an eagle and were unable to carry off the sky king alive. The furious bird made such good use of his beak and claws that the gentlemen were finally obliged to hold him under water until he was drowned, in order to demonstrate that one of them was not in reality a captive of the eagle.—Main Woods.

What Information Advertisers Need

What Some Men Lose Who Lack It

Do you know, Mr. Advertiser, who buys your goods? Do you know where they live—what they read?

Do you know why some buy, and why others don't buy? Why some prefer a rival manufacture?

Do you know why some sections pay better than others? Why you lose trade when you lose it?

Do you know what damage substitution is doing—how and where and why? Do you know all your opposition?

Do you know, above all, how your arguments appeal? Have you tried them face-to-face?

It forms, we consider, the greatest contribution we ever have made to advertising.

It is the science of doing; by clever maneuvers, what used to be done by time, cost and attack.

It does a year's work in a week, sometimes. It secures, by one move, nationwide distribution. It has placed many an article, from the very jump, on a profit-paying basis.

It removes the uncertainties, minimizes risk, multiplies selling power. Many millions of dollars, which were otherwise lost, have been pocketed by men who employed it.

All this is told, for the first time, in a book. It reveals, as we never revealed before, the secrets of our success.

The ideas have been gathered from a thousand sources. We owe them to countless able men.

To pay the debt, we offer them to others. Also to give you a new idea of what advertising efficiency means.

Any man with a selling problem is welcome to this book. In justice to himself he should get it.

Cut out this reminder; put it in your pocket. Then, when convenient, write us for the book.
